

Intentional Parenting

Every believing parent hopes his or her child will embrace the faith and grow deep spiritual roots. But studies show that over half of those growing up in Christian homes will walk away from Christianity at some point. Too often, parents “outsource” the spiritual formation of their children to the church. While a good church is very important, God designed the family to be the primary place where faith is nurtured. Questioning the religious tradition of childhood is part of growing up. How can parents increase the likelihood their children will embrace a faith that will survive the hardest of times? Here are four principles that can help parents become more intentional about their child’s faith.

THE LEGACY PRINCIPLE

The scriptures tell us that what we do today directly influences the multi-generational cycle of family traits, beliefs and actions – for good or bad (Exodus 20:5-6, Psalm 78:5-8). Passing a strong faith to our children begins by having a strong faith ourselves. Some of us need to break negative cycles that may have started with our own upbringing in order to launch a new, improved legacy for the next generation.

THE LIKELIHOOD PRINCIPLE

The good news is this: in the context of healthy relationships, children tend to embrace the values of their parents. Proverbs 22:6 tells us that when children learn right from wrong at home under the nurturing, loving training of parents, they tend to adopt mom and dad’s beliefs. While there are no guarantees because every child has a free will, kids are far more likely to embrace their parent’s faith if they enjoy their parent’s company! That’s a big part of the reason parents are warned not to “provoke your children to anger” but rather “bring them up in the discipline and instruction of the Lord” (Ephesians 6:4). Bottom line – a strong relationship with mom and dad is key to a strong Christian faith.

THE LENSES PRINCIPLE

Jesus taught that our enemy’s primary weapon is deception – getting us to believe and live according to lies rather than truth (John 8:44). Our children are growing up in a culture that bombards them with lies. An hour or two per week at church is no match for the hundreds of hours spent with media, school, and friends. Nor can it compete with a child’s fallen nature that often wants to rebel against what is good, true and beautiful. It is the job of parents to equip children with the corrective “lenses” of truth so they can better navigate the deceptive roads of life.

THE LEARNING PRINCIPLE

Our children can only learn what we teach them in a manner that will reach them. In other words, we need to vary our approach based upon their unique personality, learning style, and most importantly, stage of development. Children fall into one of three stages that should guide the methods we choose for discussing our faith and values at home.

The Imprint Period: (toddler to about age seven)

Small children are all ears. They will believe it because mom or dad said it, much like a baby gosling that imprints itself onto its mother and follows it wherever she leads. Young children soak in what we tell them – so this is an ideal season for teaching them basic bible stories, memorization, and other building block truths of Christianity.

The Impression Period (about age eight to early teen)

During this season, children no longer accept what we say at face value. They may question us, push back, or even argue. During this season, children do need to know what we believe while also needing help to understand the rationale behind those beliefs. While more work, this is a positive part of their faith development because it means they have grown past blind acceptance and are ready for deeper understanding.

The Coaching Period (early teen to young adult)

Our job changes when the kids enter the coaching period. We can motivate, encourage, challenge and advise. We can't force feed. We can help them clearly articulate what they believe, challenge their thinking, remind them of the "basics" learned during the "practices" of the imprint and impression years. We can provide a safe environment to wrestle with, even question, the values they've learned. Maintaining a strong relationship and frequent dialogue is vital to this stage. A coach prepares his players. When it is game-time the coach cannot play for his team, rather they use the skills taught to them to fight for victory.

In light of these realities, parents can become intentional about creating and capturing opportunities to nurture the roots of faith in their children.

GOING FURTHER – Resources

Recommended Books:

Some books are available for checkout at the Faith@Home Center or purchase online.

My Heart's at Home: Becoming the Intentional Mom Your Family Needs (by Jill Savage)

It Starts At Home (by Kurt Bruner and Steve Stroope) helps parents understand the process of faith formation at home and a practical plan for becoming intentional.

Parenting Beyond Your Capacity (by Reggie Joiner and Carey Nieuwhof) encourages parents to partner with the faith community to bring the next generation into the family of God-and keep them there.

Parents' Guide to the Spiritual Growth of Children (by John Trent, Rick Osborne and Kurt Bruner) offers a road map for parents to shape the faith of children under twelve years old.

Parents' Guide to the Spiritual Mentoring of Teens (by Joe White and Jim Weidmann) helps parents coach the faith formation of older children.

Your Heritage (by Kurt Bruner & J. Otis Ledbetter) shows how to give children a strong spiritual legacy – including an assessment of the legacy parents received themselves.

The Blessing (by Dr. John Trent) explains the life-changing gift the Bible calls "the blessing."

Recommended Website:

MoveNightChat.com recommends films and spiritual discussion ideas for parent/teen movie nights.

GOING FURTHER - Church Support

Children's and Student ministries are here to help! Call the church office at 757-489-3134 or email Chris Langley, Youth Minister (clangley32@me.com) if you have any questions about being intentional.